1.0 Policy

Note: A federal court order of May 11, 1976 required the Detroit school system to organize school-community relations bodies on a local school, regional, and citywide basis. School-community relations committees for local schools and regions, and a citywide school-community relations counsel, were subsequently organized.

Later, the Michigan legislature passed Public Act 71, recentralizing the Detroit school district and dissolving regional school board and regions. The act however, requires a school-community organization for each school.

Currently (April, 1983) the framework for school-community relations bodies is under redevelopment.
